Slave's Son 104

Recently one of the Baltimore, Maryland newspapers carried the following story about Daniel Pannell who was born in 1868. He is the uncle of Harry Pannell, local taxi driver, and James Pannell, both of Appomattox.

Thanks to them for relaying the story that our readers might have the opportunity to read about the man who has reached the age of 104.

by John C. Robinson

Daniel Pannell was born in 1868 - three years after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. He was four years old when Ulysses S. Grant won re-election as president over Horace Greeley and Tsar Alexander II was ruling Russia.

Daniel Pannell is alive today at 104 and lives in East Baltimore in the 1700 block N. Washington St. with only a few "minor ailments".

As Pannell tells it, his forebearers lived near Patrick Henry and his father, Harry Pannell, was a former slave Henry's descendants.

Until a tragic fire last year destroyed his home and killed his wife of 75 years, Pannell lived on an historic plot of land in Charlotte County, Va.

According to old records produced by Mrs. Rachel Pannell, his daughter-in-law, the Pannell farm adjoines property where "for more than a century Henry's remains lay buried in a remote spot at'Red Hill, his last home in Charlotte County."

In 1944, a group headed by James S. Easley, an attorney from Halifax County organized the Patrick Henry Memorial Foundation. Money was raised to secure the deed to the 1,000 acre plot to make Red Hill an orphanage for boys.

Today Red Hill and the Pannell farm still exist on a sprawling track of land 85 miles from Richmond.

About the time Pannell started to earn his living, Thomas Edison was securing a patent for his new invention, the phonograph.

"I remember when I first started working," he recalls, "suppose I make about 25 cents a day. That's more than it sounds like because we grew our own food."

Pannell remembers cooking "ash cakes" (little corn patties baked in hot ashes under the bricks of a fireplace) for his family and the meals around the evening fire.

Although he is approaching his 105th birthday, his family says he has an alert mind and is able to get around very well.

After undergoing a routine medical check, Pannell was reportedly described by hospital officials as "the oldest patient ever to walk into Mercy Hospital."

Although he never learned to read or write, Pannell constantly thumbs through magazines, newspapers and books "or any printed material he can get his hands on."

Being a centigenerian can create some mind-boggling statistics: Daniel Pannell was 46 when World War I started - too old for the draft. he was married to the same woman, Francis Pannell for 75 years. He has 10 great-grandchildren and 34 grandchildren. His "baby" is 58 years old.

"My first car," he said, "was a 1924 Ford. I was married and had a family then. My sons (he has six sons and two daughters) did the driving."

He remembers "being in Baltimore a long time ago" but most of his life was spent in West Virginia and his birthplace in Virginia.

Despite the tragic death of his wife, Pannell talked without any outward sign of grief about the fire that destroyed a portion of his life:

"The fire wiped out everything. All I saved was my one year-old clock."

Mrs. Rachel Pannell said the clock (a large mantel clock with a brass pendulum) had been repaired by a local repairman and although Pannell had given it to her when he first arrived, he has now begun to refer to it as "our clock."
